- China is not just a source of imports. It is also a large and growing market for US exports.
- In 2005, China surpassed the United Kingdom to become the fourth-largest US export market.
- When US exports to Hong Kong are included to reflect the integration of the greater Chinese economy, China ranks as our third-largest export market, ahead of Japan.
- This places the combined China-Hong Kong market behind only Canada and Mexico as an export destination for American products—and those two countries are neighbors with whom we have a free trade agreement.

Growth in US Exports to Top 15 Markets*, 2000–05

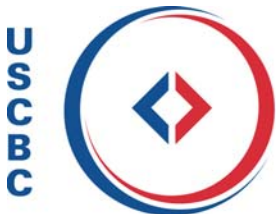

- US exports to China since 2000 have grown at a faster rate than our exports to any other major export market. Between 2000 and 2005, exports to China increased 157 percent. Electronic and high-tech components, machinery and equipment, medical instruments, plastics, aircraft, iron and steel, and agricultural products were among the largest US exports to China.
- The next-fastest-growing major export market for US products over the past five years was Belgium, with fuel oil, dairy and eggs, and corn among the key export products.
- Of the top five US export markets in 2005—Canada, Mexico, Japan, China, and the United Kingdom—exports to Japan and the United Kingdom have dropped since 2000 and exports to Mexico have increased only slightly.
