CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT EXPORT REPORT

432 OUT OF 435 CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS
HAVE SEEN TRIPLE-DIGIT GROWTH IN EXPORTS
OF GOODS OR SERVICES TO CHINA SINCE 2006

Executive Summary

Exports to China: Vital to US economic growth

- China's economic growth rate is slowing, but it remains an important market for US exports. In 2016, US goods exports to China totaled $113 billion, holding steady with the previous year and still the third-largest US goods export market behind Canada and Mexico.
- Exports of services to China are becoming significant. In 2015, the most recent complete year of available data, US services exports to China totaled $47 billion, making China the United States' third-largest services export market. From 2006 to 2015, US services exports to China increased more than 400 percent. Services exports to the rest of the world increased 76 percent.
- Global trade is slowing, but exports of US goods and services to China continue to outpace exports to other major markets. On average, US goods exports to China grew by 8 percent annually over the past 10 years, despite the modest decline over the past two years versus 2014. Of the United States' top 10 goods export markets, only Japan had positive export growth in 2016, reflecting an overall slowdown in global trade.
- US services exports to China grew more rapidly than all other major trading partners, averaging nearly 19 percent annually over the last decade. Only Brazil came close over the same period, with 17 percent average annual growth. The 6.8 percent growth in services exports to China in 2015 far outpaced growth in exports to the United States' top three markets: the United Kingdom (3.4 percent), Canada (-9.2 percent), and Japan (-5.2 percent).
- China's maturing economy is undergoing important changes that have resulted in a slowdown in GDP and trade growth. Even so, US exports of goods and services to China have grown faster than exports to any other major US trading partner over the past decade. From 2006 to 2016, US goods exports to China increased 114 percent. That is greater than the growth to any of the other top 10 US goods export markets, including the two largest US trading partners: Canada (41 percent growth) and Mexico (13 percent growth).
- Exports continue to play an essential role in the US economy and job growth. US goods exports to China come from a wide range of industries including transportation equipment, agriculture, computers and electronics, and chemicals. These exports also sustain logistics jobs in America's ports and throughout the country. US services exports to China in 2015 included travel and education, royalties, transportation, business and professional services, and financial services.

DISTRICT EXPORT REPORT

China: An important market for congressional districts across the country

- Most congressional districts have seen significant growth in exports of goods or services to China since 2006. 432 out of 435 districts saw triple-digit growth in exports of services to China since 2006, and 190 districts saw similar growth in exports of goods.
- The value of US goods and services exports to China is significant for congressional districts around the country. China was a top three goods export market for 263 districts in 2016, and among the top five for 358 districts. China was the top services export market in 2015 for 93 congressional districts and a top five market for 399 districts.

More can be done to strengthen US exports to China

- China is a significant market for US exports and it should be even bigger. The United States has a small share of China's overall market. US goods accounted for about 8.4 percent of China's total imports in 2015, trailing behind China's purchases from the European Union, South Korea, Japan, and Taiwan. That market share represents a decline from 2000, when the United States held a 10 percent share of China's import market.
- Expanding market opportunities in China requires a variety of tools. China maintains an array of tariff and non-tariff barriers that prevent more American goods, agriculture products, and services from reaching Chinese customers. The United States should continue to bring legally sound, industry-supported cases to the World Trade Organization. Congress should expand the resources at the Office of the United States Trade Representative to build upon the successful track record of using the WTO to address unfair Chinese trade practices. The Trump administration should pursue results-oriented engagement with China designed to address barriers of longstanding concern.
- In addition, the United States should push forward negotiations with China on a high-standard bilateral investment treaty, which would reduce ownership and licensing barriers that keep American companies from selling more products and services in China, including exports.

Methodology

This year's edition of the US-China Business Council (USCBC) US Exports to China by Congressional District report uses data provided by The Trade Partnership, an economic research firm. The report provides a separate breakdown of each district's goods and services exports to China. The national export totals include the export data for each district and for Washington, DC. The report reflects exports from Congressional district boundaries in place during the 115th Congress, including newly drawn boundaries for districts in Florida, North Carolina, and Virginia. All historical estimates have been revised to reflect the current districts.

Goods export figures are based primarily on data from the US Census Bureau, the US Department of Agriculture (USDA), and Moody's Analytics. Goods export figures are classified according to the US government's North American Industry Classification (NAICS) system. Services export figures are based primarily on data from the US Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) and Moody's Analytics. Services export figures are classified according to the BEA categories.

This year's edition of US Exports to China by Congressional District uses more detailed sector categories for both goods and services. The number of reported goods sectors increased from 29 last year to 104 this year, while the number of reported services sectors increased from 8 to 33. In both cases, the more detailed sectors provide a better sense of the types of goods and services exported to China. For example, whereas past editions reported exports of "Machinery," this edition breaks those exports down further to "Agricultural & Construction Machinery," "HVAC & Refrigeration Equipment," and "Engines & Turbines."

Goods exports cover 2006-2016; services exports are reported through 2015, the most recent year detailed services export data are available from BEA. As historical data from each of these sources is revised annually, this issue of US Exports to China by Congressional District replaces all prior editions.

Similar to previous editions of US Exports to China by Congressional District, this report uses a methodology that credits agricultural exports to districts where crops are grown as opposed to districts with large ports where bulk commodities are aggregated prior to export. A detailed explanation of the methodology for goods and services export estimates is available at <http://tradepartnership.com/data/cdxports-and-cdxjobs/>.

This year's edition of US Exports to China by Congressional District includes estimates for US jobs supported by exports to China from each district. Estimates for "direct" and "indirect" jobs tied to exports to China from a given district are derived using domestic employment requirement tables from the US Bureau of Labor Statistics. Estimates are calculated at the sector level and then summed to determine the total US jobs supported by exports from the district. All reported jobs figures are for 2015, the most recent year available for both goods and services. Since "indirect" jobs may be located outside the district (e.g., autos exported from a district in South Carolina may support tire manufacturing jobs in a district in Ohio), it is important to note the distinction between "US jobs supported by exports from Ohio to China," as reported here, and "jobs in Ohio supported by exports to China," which are not reported here.

Additional notes on goods export categories:

NAICS 3399 (Miscellaneous Manufacturing) – According to the Census Bureau, “Miscellaneous Manufacturing” includes a wide range of products that cannot readily be classified in specific NAICS subsectors in manufacturing. Establishments in this subsector manufacture products as diverse as jewelry, sporting goods, toys, and office supplies.

NAICS 9100 (Waste & Scrap) – The Census Bureau includes a variety of second-hand scrap and recycled materials in this export classification, including ferrous metals, copper, aluminum, paper, wood, and sawdust. Many of these products are used by China to produce rebar steel and packaging materials.

Additional notes on services export categories:

Credit-Related Services – BEA classifies non-depository, non-investment financial transactions as credit-related services. The services may include credit card issuing, sales financing, trade financing, and similar activities.

Royalties from Industrial Processes – According to the BEA, “Royalties from Industrial Processes” include transactions with nonresidents that involve intangible assets – including patents, trade secrets, and other proprietary rights – that are used in connection with the production of goods.

Top US Goods Export Markets, 2016

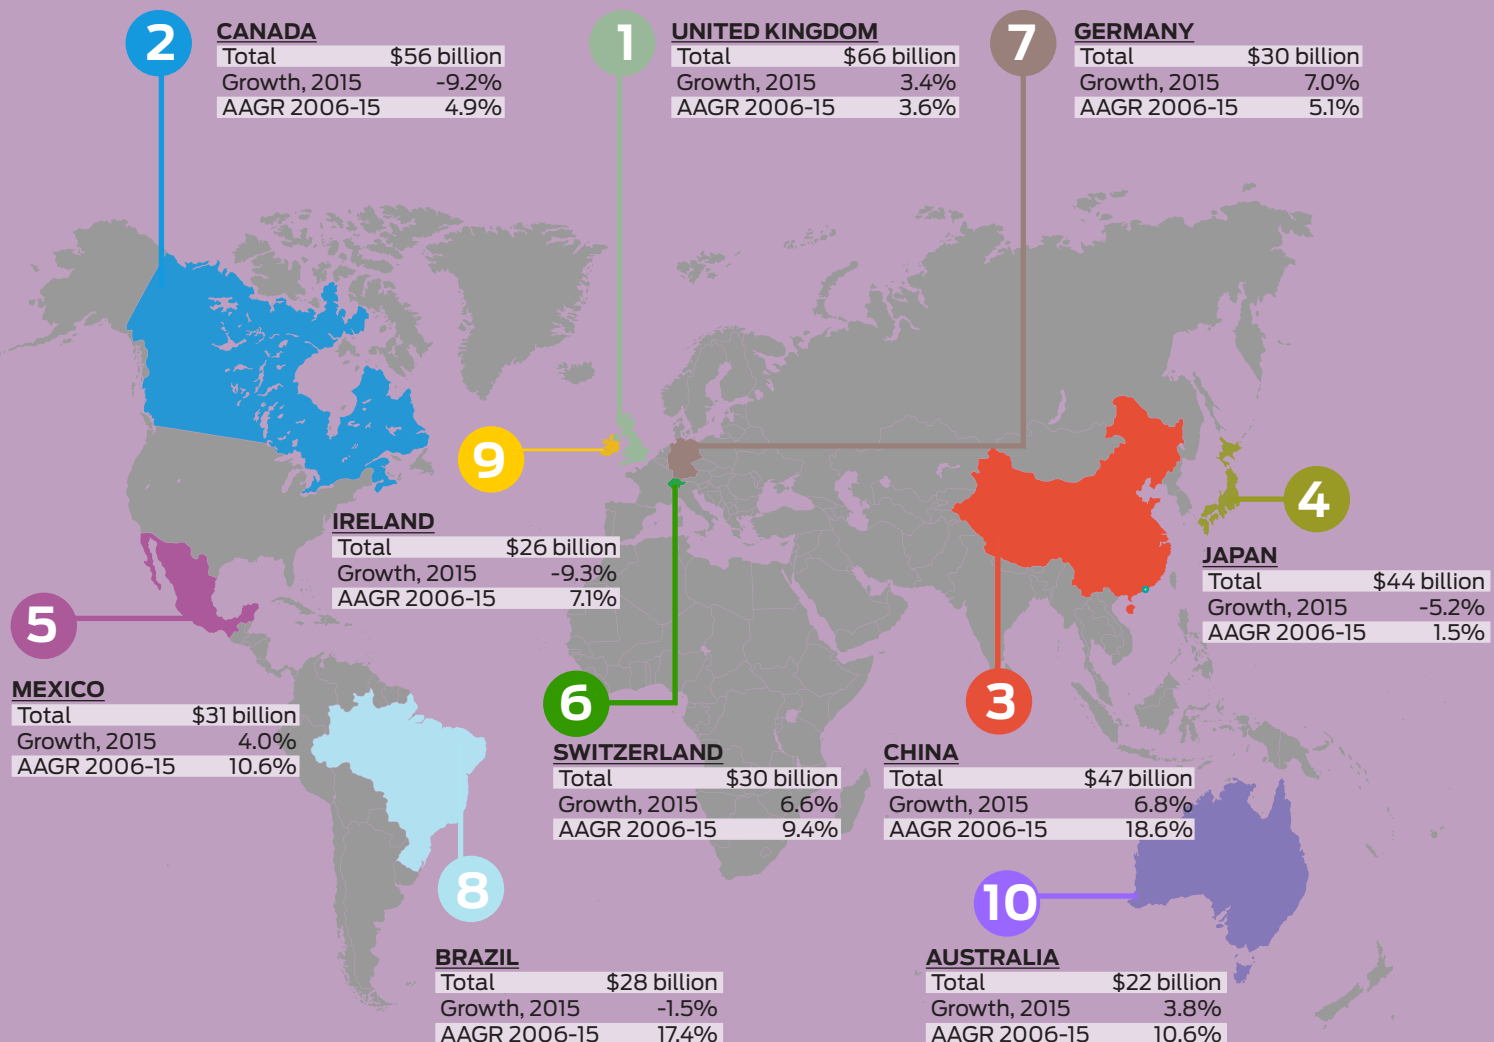

“Growth” represents 2016 annual growth. “AAGR” represents the average annual growth from 2006-2016.

- China continues to be an important market for US goods exports, even as China's economy slows. China is currently the United States' third-largest export market. In 2016, US exports to China reached more than $113 billion.
- Although US exports to China slowed in 2016 compared to previous years, US exports to China have grown faster over the last decade than exports to the other top 10 US trade partners.
- Hong Kong is often a throughpoint for US exports ultimately destined for China. In 2016, combined US exports to Hong Kong and China totaled nearly $145 billion.

Top US Services Export Markets, 2015

“Growth” represents 2015 annual growth. “AAGR” represents the average annual growth from 2006-2015.

- China is an increasingly important market for US services exports and is currently the United States' third-largest export market. In 2015, US services exports to China reached more than $47 billion.
- Despite China's slowing economy, US exports to China have grown faster over the last decade than exports to any other top US trade partner. US services exports include travel and tourism, when Chinese students and visitors come to the United States; royalties from industrial processes, such as patents; and business management and advisory services.

Note: Rankings are based on export data for 2006 and 2016 for goods, and 2006 and 2015 for services, comparing the top 10 markets for US exports. "Rest of World" export growth for this page is calculated using the cumulative sums for US exports to all remaining markets (non-top 10) for those years. Full-year services export data are available only through year-end 2015.

China's imports

China's top 5 import sources in 2016, in billions

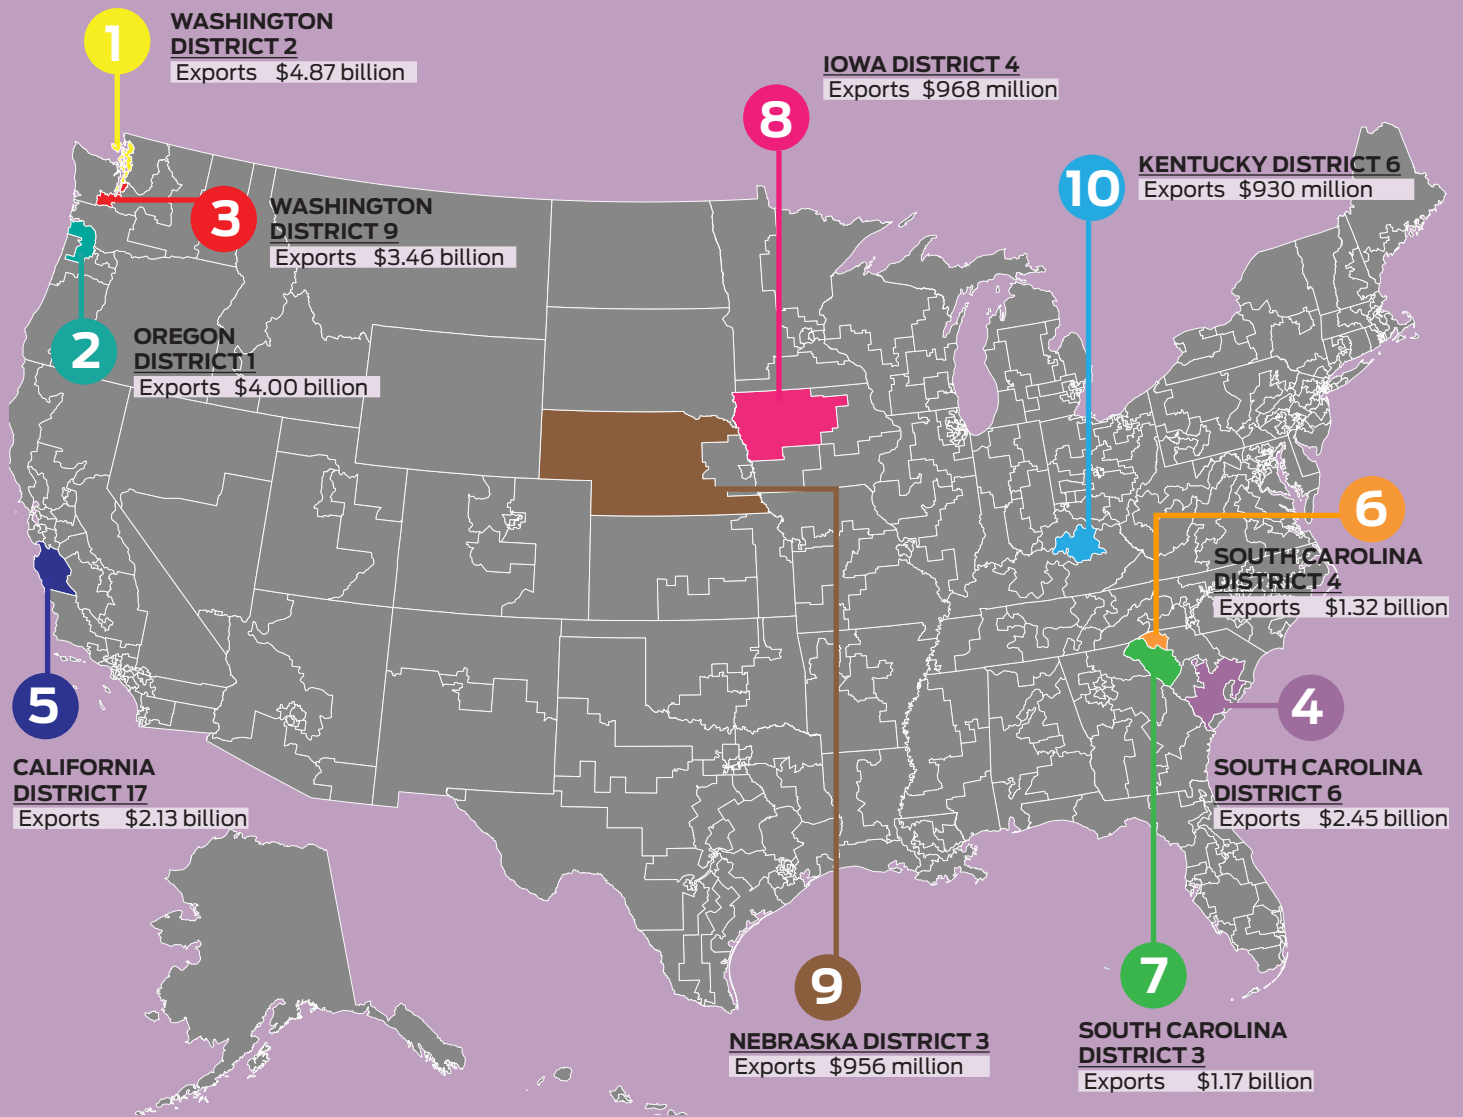

THE UNITED STATES IS ONLY CHINA'S FIFTH-LARGEST SOURCE OF IMPORTS

- The European Union and South Korea continue to export more goods to China than the United States. The United States also fell two places in 2016 to become the fifth-ranked source of imports for China, overtaken by Taiwan and Japan.
- Although US exports to China have grown significantly over the last decade, US imports to China in 2016 accounted for about 8.4 percent of China's total imports.
- China's slowing economy has had an impact on its purchases of US goods. Chinese imports of US products between 2015 and 2016 were down 9.6 percent. While the decline was notable, three of the other top import sources to China saw declines: imports from Taiwan were down 2.8 percent, from South Korea were down 8.9 percent, and from the EU were down 0.4 percent. Only Japanese imports saw an increase — of 1.7 percent.

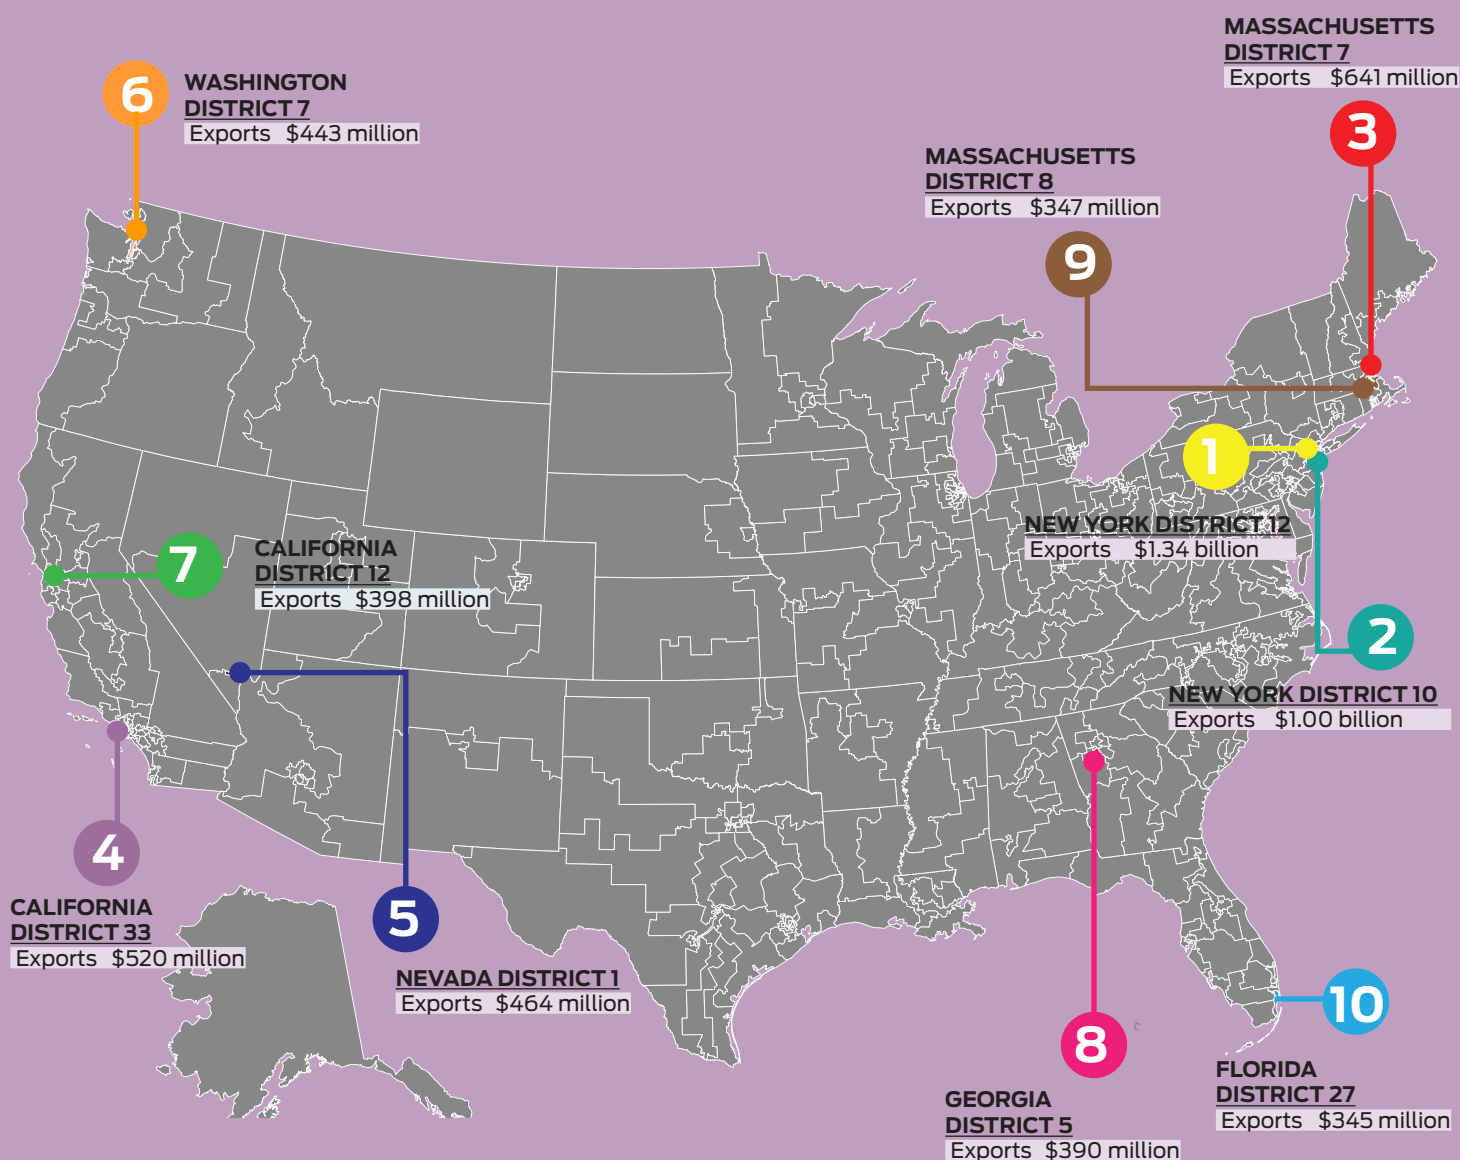

Note: Data for this chart are based on PRC government statistics. The value of PRC imports from the United States is higher than US exports to China because of several data discrepancies between US and PRC trade statistics, reflecting methodological differences regarding shipping costs, as well as tariffs that are applied as goods pass through other customs territories on their way to China.

Top District Goods Exporters to China, 2016

- Last year, over 40 congressional districts exported more than $500 million in goods to China. 190 districts saw triple digit growth in exports of goods to China since 2006.
- China was a top three goods export market for 263 districts in 2016, and among the top five for 358 districts.

Top District Services Exporters to China, 2015

- 432 out of 435 districts saw triple digit growth in exports of services to China since 2006. China was the top services export market in 2015 for 93 congressional districts and a top five market for 399 districts.
- In 2015, two districts exported more than $1 billion in services to China – NY-10 and NY-12, in New York City and its boroughs – and another two districts exported more than $500 million – CA-33, in the Los Angeles area and MA-07, around Boston. More than a quarter of US districts exported over $100 million dollars in services to China in 2015.
